From 9 months more texture is added to your baby's food. Try to start with replacing one flavour from the EXPLORER TUMMY range with a flavour from the HUNGRY TUMMY range. Use a fork for a smoother texture, or add some water to gradually get your baby to accept textured food. Recipes available on our YouTube Channel.

7 DAY MEAL PLAN EXAMPLE. ADJUST ACCORDING TO BABY'S NEEDS

HOW CAN A BABY BE ASSISTED WITH TEXTURE INTRODUCTION

Texture introduction starts at a very young age. As babies grow they start to put everything in their mouths. This is a good thing, as long as it is clean and safe to play with. This already helps babies to "de-sensitize" their mouths, preparing them for more textured food later on.

Small toothbrushes are also a good way for them to feel a new texture in their mouth. The "dummy-feeder" with the little bag for fruits/vegetables or ice is another great way to introduce texture in those mouths.

Remember that every new flavour and texture is something new. Babies will not always love it immediately, and in some cases it will take 10-20 times of introduction before they will start to accept a flavour. Be PATIENT.

This range is aimed at introducing new flavours and textures to a baby's diet after the Explorer Tummy range has been introduced.

Flavours like cinnamon, vanilla, tomato, ginger, garlic are all new in this range and will prepare your baby for your "table foods" later.

GUIDELINES:

- Between 7-9 months is the best time to introduce as many flavours as possible, because babies are open to new flavours. This will create a food reference for many years to come.
- Parents should add their own food and textures to the range, to create a larger variety. Tummies Full of Love is developed with products that freeze well. There are additional food options to create more mealtime choices, but these cannot always be frozen. A few good food options to include are: couscous, rice, potato, avocado, papaya, banana, baby marrow, kiwi, blueberries, pasta, and steamed vegetable cubes for kids to eat with their fingers.
- Also start to give cooked porridge for breakfast. Good examples are oats, maltabella, kreemey meal and wheat-bix. AVOID ANY SUGARY CEREALS, as they are not suitable for babies.

NOTE

Gagging is normal when coarser textures are introduced, but reflex will disappear as your child gets used to a wider range of textures and eats it on a regular basis. Give them a chance to learn their bodies and what they are capable of.

When your baby starts to vomit during the meal and texture introduction, rather stop and mix in a bit of puree, or try again the next day. Should this persist for longer than 2 weeks, consult an occupational or speech therapist that specialises in food.

If there are signs that a baby might be sensitive to textures, not only with eating, but also while playing with different textures, advice should be sought from an occupational therapist or speech therapist sooner rather than later.

PLEASE CONSULT A HEALTHCARE PROFESSIONAL ABOUT INFANT FEEDING AND INTRODUCTION TO SOLIDS

Introducing texture is the most challenging phase for most moms, and they usually give up too fast. Yes, your baby will take longer to eat. Take yourself for example: it's easier to sip down a yogurt than to actually eat a whole apple? Your baby will prefer the easy way, but it is our responsibility to make sure this phase takes place. This can have a major impact on the rest of a baby's development. Even if a baby does not have teeth, babies can chew with their gums.

Remember, babies are not expected to bite off a big piece of food; we are talking about chewing. When a baby chews, they are learning to move food around with their tongues. This movement also assists in developing mouth muscles, which will help a baby with speech development. Texture introduction will also prepare a baby to join in on family meals.
